All, from Elvis Presley to cat food manufacturers, have kidnapped this work inspired by Nietzsche for its great entrances, but Kubrick came there first. In the TIME 2001, the title credit appears under that sustained musical rack, the combination of sound and the image has already transported it to infinity and beyond. Thank you for subscribing! Bulletin in his entry tray soon! More on time on the Kilgore air-calvary strike sounds like a hammer blow from the gods. Stanley Kubrick wanted to use classic compositions instead of the Alex North Commissioned score (and Discarded) to reach an appropriately massive soundtrack to his masterpiece of cerebral science fiction, and the Richard Strauss tone poem provides the moments of opening the film with an immediate sense of reach and greatness. This is what the majesty of the universe sounds. His romance of the lost connection, between a tired police of the world and a young Pixie, receives an injection of ENnui urban through the pop-up of John Phillips & Co.
